The Simone de Beauvoir Institute was founded in 1978 to promote the understanding of the historical and contemporary role of women in society. It is the first institution to combine an academic base in Women's Studies with a collective life aimed at helping women to discover and develop their full potential, individually and socially.

The date of this first conference to be hosted by the Institute was chosen to coincide with the 1980 meetings of the Learned Societies at the University of Quebec at Montreal. This national conference is expected to help the Institute prepare for an international Women's Conference in 1982, in conjunction with UNESCO.
